WHATABOUTERY between sensing and making sense

On June 8 the Crafting Wearables team will host a "Whataboutery" night. During this evening we will share the results of our research project, followed by a debate on the theme #tech.

The interdisciplinary research team of Crafting Wearables has developed several robust designs of wearable technology and adapted a variety of philosophical concepts to understand their broader social and cultural implications. What happens if we try to speak of technology in terms of textiles? Or when the interface is no longer a touchscreen but the jacket you are wearing? Tonight, we will challenge the audience to envision the many ways in which wearables change our senses, our perception, and our being in the world.
